PERQUIMANS RECEIVES $200,000 TO START A "BUSINESS INCUBATOR"

Perquimans County doesn't lack for friends with money, leaders in this county seat learned Monday. The North Carolina Technological Development Authority Inc., a partly public and partly private economic promotion agency in Raleigh's Research Triangle, decided to spend the money to establish a small-business incubator in the area. Three other counties, linked with Perquimans by geography and heritage, will share in the designed benefits.

"The proposed 10,000 square-foot business incubator, located in Hertford, will serve the counties of Perquimans, Chowan, Pasquotank and Gates ... for start-up and expansion of small industries," said Peggy Brotherton, a spokeswoman for the authority. When the new agency gets started, it will be the third major economic growth facility to locate in Hertford in recent years.

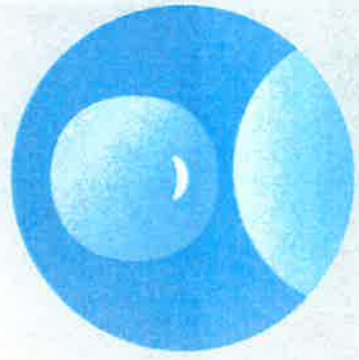

The well-established Albemarle Commission, through many ups and downs, has provided extensive economic services for 10 Albemarle counties for more than a decade. The new Perquimans County business incubator will be managed by a 17-member board of directors, officials of the N.C. Technological Development Authority said. The directors include many leading businessmen and women in North Carolina as well as local legislators.

"I foresee the Perquimans County business incubator as an investment in the growth and development of the community," said state Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare, who helped get the authority started in the Research Triangle. The incubator will be managed by a 17-member board of directors, officials of the N.C. Technological Development Authority said. The directors include many leading businessmen and women in North Carolina as well as local legislators.

"We recognize small businesses as strong and viable contributors to our community," said Mayor Fred Yates of nearby Wintfall. Yates is chairman of the Perquimans 2020 Vision Coalition, a nonprofit organization incorporated in 1992. "It will be important to me to know that we are doing something that Another member of the board of directors of the business incubator is state Rep. Howard Hunter Jr., D-Murfreesboro. Hunter and Yates will serve on the board with many influential business and professional leaders, "Yates said. Hunter said the new incubator should translate into hands-on business for start-ups."

into hands-on business for start-ups."
